PANMUNJOM (CP) - The PANMUNJOM (CP) — The Communists notified the United Nations command today that six Canadians would be among 300 Allied prisoners to be released Thursday.

Their release would boost to 30 the number of Canadians irreed.

30 the number of Canadians I freed.
Twenty-one Canadians are unaccounted for in Korea.
The Red release of UN prisoners today passes the 11,500-mark out of a total of 12,782 they said they held when the exchange began August 5.
Today's group — 100 Americans and 200 South Koreansmarks the first sharp dip below the Red schedule of 400 a day. There was unofficial speculation that the cut-down might signal the beginning of Red sparring for more captives. They accuse the Allies of holding back 250 captives, including ringleaders of Red prisoner riots on Koje Island.

Batista Again Takes Over, 20 Years After First Coup

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—Twenty years ago this week, the world heard for the first time of an army sergeant named Fulgencio Batista.

It was a name new in Cubs, too, but he became the strong man of the little republic and stayed in power 11 years.

September 4, 1933, the 32-year-old sergeant-stenographer led the first successful revolution ever staged by a non-commissioned officer in Latin America.

Batists struck when the officers officer in Latin America.

Batista struck when the officers were asleep and President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, in office three weeks, was in Matanzas province surveying damage from a hurricane which caused 100 deaths.

Batista took over a land in political those. In addition, Cuba was in the throes of world depression, the army was split wide open between officers and enlisted men. And the country was still recling from the revolution of a few weeks before-which had overthrown Gerardo Machado, the dictator-president.

the dictator-president.

That revolution, in fact, was one of Batista's major problems. It created a horde of men who called themselves revolutionaries for real or imaginary participation in Machado's overthrow.

The problem for Batista—and for the nation as well—arose from the fact that all claiming to be revolutionaries wanted an active hand in the government. There was political tugging and pushing such as the country had never known before.

After Batista's coup a five-man commission was named/to run the government. Batista's was the power behind it. The government was such a shaky structure the United States sent warships to try to keep the Island republic from failing to pieces.

Between September 4, 1933, and October 10, 1940, Cuba had seven presidents named with the approval of Batista. It was not until October 10, 1940, that Batista himself took over the job. He served a full term and stepped down, turning the office over to Ramon Grau San Martin. Batista, who had once sent Grau into exile, jost no time himself in seeking exile abroad. But for aman who had run the nation for 11 years, his action in turning over the government. his action in turning over the government to the enemy the people had chosen brought applause from democracies throughout the world.

Grau and his administration are now charged with mishandling $174,000,000 in government funds. The government of Carlos Prio Socarras, Grau's hand-picked "torch-bearer," is charged by Batista with thievery of about $150,000,000. It was to "rid Cuba of anarchy once again." Batista says, that he staged a coup March 10, 1952.

Prio fled, and now lives in Miami, Fla. Grau stayed in Cuba. Technically, he has been on trial since the graft charges were filed in January, 1949, but he is at liberty. Cubana have seen no indication that the trial is nearing an end.

Today Batista is credited with full support by the military forces. Cubs is at peace, but under emergency measures. Batists suspended constitutional guarantees such as liberty of press, of assembly, of apeech. The emergency measures, backed up by censorship, came after a band of po litical opponents attacked two army garrisons in eastern Cuba.

Winning a Long Struggle

CREAT Britain's steady recovery from the pressure of an economic handicap which was certainly the worst of her postwar legacies will occasion sincere pleasure throughout the Commonwealth. A trade surplus of $300,000,000, a lively export market for manufactured goods, cheaper imported raw materials, almost the end of rationing, and some neat "firsts" in the fields of aviation, engineering and science add up to a most impres-sive advance. Wise in her knowledge of ing and science add up to a most impressive advance. Wise in her knowledge of the world, Britain foresaw much that has come to pass in the last few years, especially in relation to world market prices on the imports she needs. That vision, counled with her export policy, has paid off handsomely.

The essential ingredient of the United Kingdom's plucky industrial come-back has been work: the grit to stick to the effort through thick and thin. One cannot help but admire the spirit with which Britons emerged from the severe pound-ing of war at first hand to buckle down to the long, hard task on the economic front. It may not be ended yet, but trade deficits do not turn into trade balances overnight or without conscious striving. Britons, under rationing and every other Britons, under rationing and every other handicap, were content to go without some of the conveniences and comforts of life in order to pull their country out of the red. They knew it might take years and that substantially they had chiefly themselves to rely upon, yet they set out courageously on the long fourney. Now that the horizons are lifting and some of the sharpness of "austerity" is behind them, Britons will be repaid for their sturdy faith in themselves and for the long period of self-denial which has made possible this steady return from a postwar condition which was unexampled in their history. Brave in the face of danger, strong in adversity, and willing to work for a result of their own choosto work for a result of their own choosing, citizens of the British Isles have indeed provided an object lesson in courage to the whole world. That their clouds may be lifting and giving place now to brighter skies seems richly de-

A Touch of Grace

ONE hundred volunteers - firemen soldiers, farmhands, construction gangs-worked steadily round the clock; bulldozers, power shovels, lights, hammers representing thousands of dollars' worth of equipment, were brought into use; food and drink were rushed by the carload to keep the operation going. And the operation? A 70-hour struggle to save the life of a small dog fallen into a deep rock crevice.

"Money couldn't buy" the effort put forth, said a police official at the scene. Money never can. Money is never the criterion when human compassion is roused to a high pitch of intensity. There are those who might argue that this was an extravagant employment of human hands and minds, all for the sake of a dog, but they would be wrong. This out-pouring of sympathy for an animal in sore plight is the kind of action that redeems mankind.

Had the incident involved a young boy or girl instead of a small dog the response would have been much greater. Never a disaster occurs but what the volunteer effort to help is forthcoming on a scale that adds grace to the human species. In times of great distress or acute hazard there are always men and women ready and willing to come to the rescue, to spare no labor and to risk life itself in bringing relief and safety to those in danger. It is then that humanity rises to its greatest and most selfless role. The pity is perhaps that it should take disaster or like happening to bring forth this latent goodness in human hearts; that this latent goodness in human hearts: that in the common round of daily living more of this kindliness of spirit is not in evi-dence. As it is, however, this tale of sacrilice and effort to save a little dog in Ontario last week end is a heartening and warming thing. It shines forth in a world beset these days by so much that is sombre and selfish.

Not Under Proper Control

DESPITE constant warnings by traffic safety authorities, the practice of nose-to-tail driving continues to cause multiple-car accidents on the highways, sometimes serious and always expensive, with the cost of repairing dented fenders and grille-work what it is today. Accidents of this kind are inaccurately described as freaks, for there is nothing freakish about them. They are due to foolish and all too common disregard of one of the simplest rules of safe driving. which is to keep enough distance behind the car ahead to enable a sudden stop to be made without danger or collision.

Accidents in which several cars tele-scope one another usually occur on Sun-days and holidays, when the highways are one long procession of vehicles. If the general sneed is too slow for some of the cars in the line, the tendency of their drivers is to crowd, with the result that if one car stops suddenly those behind may not have enough room to avoid bumper-to-bumper impact. There was an example of this last Sunday when a car, stopping suddenly on the Island Highway, became involved in an eight-car end-to-end collision, fortunately with relatively end-collision, fortunately with relatively slight damage. On the Banff Highway in a similar accident recently damage amounted to $3,500 when 14 cars piled into one another in what the Edmonton Journal described as a scene from a

As a rough guide to what is a safe distance to allow, traffic authorities recommend one car length for each 10 miles of speed. A motorist who drives closer than that to a car ahead of him does not have his own vehicle under proper control.

TEST CRICKET MATCHES Sir. Thousands of lovers of this grand old game of cricket living in Canada, many of whom come from England, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and India and other parts of the Commonwealth, have been more than surprised at the lack of mention tails of the games by the daily CBC announcer in his sports review.

On an average two-thirds of his time every day is taken up by U.S.A. baseball which is of no interest to the majority of lovers of sport, other than baseball fans. Tuning in to BBC direct from London is the only way to get

By all means a sports announcer should give all sports taking place in Caracla daily, and important matches the world over; but for goodness sake cut out on much U.S.A. details of matches that not one person in a thousand takes the slighest interest in, and

READER wants to know if when in North Britain I saw many e "wearing kilts." Now of course off-hand the answer im-mediately is no. since no one ever wears kilts. the plurality kilts may hang from rafters or waggle in unison from hips, but when spoken of as being worn by an individual this singular garment is always singular.

Nor, let me add, does a man wear a kilt. When he does so garb himself there is nothing indefinite about it, it is always THE kilt.

Now that point is settled, however, what am I to tell my readers? I hate to spoil an illusion, and there is a widespread impression that in-habitants of the land lying north of the Tweed eat nothing but haggis. ort heather from their button) and their ears, drink avidly of Atho Brose, and are perennially accourred in the kilt. Indeed such is the power of suggestion I was almost persuaded likewise myself.

Before I went back, that is, * * *

If I am to be truthful I must say no one offered me haggis and I saw no heather, even when I ventured close to the high lands. The Balquidder hills I admired will be heathered now but when I circled them they were dappled with pleasant green. No one offered me any Athol Brose either, sad to say, although by the way I read somewhere the other day that this ambrosia, bottled, is shortly to be ready for export, a news item that I wot will tickle the anticipation of all those who swarm to the Cana-ian Scottish mess on New Year's Day for a certain specific purpose.

Nor did my eyes blink constantly at the sight of bare knees.

Believe me, as I hope you will, not once in the cities of Glasgow, Edinburgh, Stirling and St. Andrews, around the clachans of Aberfoyle, Tillicoultry and Doune, or in and about lochs Voil and Lubraig, did I

The civilian kilt, that is, I saw military kilties, of course In the Canongate I stood aside while the braw Argylls marched up the slope to Edinburgh Castle, although only the pipers wore the plaited Highland petticoat. I watched others of the regiment dance on the lawn at Stirling Castle, also of course adorned with the kill, since they were practising the Fling and the Reel.

Tartan in truth I saw aplenty, but in store windows. In the Argyle Arcade, for instance, not to be conth the Argylls, since it's in a owland city, there was a plethora of Highland things, badges, plaids, dirks, pouches, bonnets, and what have you tourists! As with the china of Government Street shops in Victoria the tartan of Scotland, like its whisks and its jokes, is produced predomi-nately for innocents abroad.

But wait, let me think! There is a notion forcing itself up wards that I did see ONE civilian kiltie, in the Baille Nicol Jarvie tavern at Aberfoyle, but now I'm not sure. Maybe it was a laird, out for a constitutional, and a refresher to cap the afternoon. If he didn't wear International Commentary ...

Is Europe in a Decline?

T was about 1920 that people began to talk about the "decline of Europe." It was said that since 1914 continental wars devastations, social crises and the absence of new and fertile ideas were condemning Europe to live thenceforward on the mem credit, which the debris strewn over the soil of the Old World seems to justify: the exasperation of ideo-logical conflicts, the sudden setback of the older nations in the face of the bulk and power of the Soviet Union and the U.S.A. However, we have just had atriking proof of the economic power of Europe in the fact that Germany, with only 80,000,000 inhabitants, has been able to hold the whole world at bay for four years in defense of an unjust cause.

The truth is that the decline of Europe is not of an economic order. It is only a result of political causes, which are not only not permanent, but last less time than their own-generations.

We do not yet know how Europe will be composed, but however that is it will be an extremely powerful economic grouping. In no way will it be in a situation comparable to that of Spain in the 17th century, or Rome in the 4th century. The decadence of those two nations was incurable because it was due to econor causes, and because whatever those peoples did they could not indefinitely vercome a structural inferiority Contemporary Europe, on the con-trary, enjoys a fundamental struc-tural wealth such that nothing short of complete ruin would make it poor To be strong, Europeans have only to refrain from tearing each other to

Can the same be said of European culture? And is it not losing ground rapidly? A mere list of the discoveries of the last few years proves, on the contrary, the unchanged fertility of this culture. The slowing down of scientific production which is said to scientific production which is said to be taking place in Europe, and par-ticularly in France, is largely due to the war and to the invasion which depopulated and ruined laboratories and stopped the appearance and ex-change of publications. But in France, England, Daly, Germany, Belgium and Holland there is an ef-fort being made to make up the lead gained by those countries that war spared. In France, for example, the establishment of the National Centre of Scientific Research has had the beneficial effect of separating research from teaching and receiving scholars, even non-university schol-ars, into its field.

following the same line has been much reduced, if not suppressed, and the essential bond between pure and applied science has been made stronger. The universities have taken an interest in industrial develo while big industries have their own research laboratories producing work which is often worthy of communication to academies and learned societies. Atomic research has been grouped in a state organization endowed with considerable funds. short, all that could be done has been done to direct without constructing.

Europe, then, is suffering no eclipse in the field of scientific activity. Its schools of mathematics and theoretical physics still remain the most brilliant in the world. In spite of its deep wounds. France is accom-plishing a colossal effort to utilize its natural resources. Nothing in the domains of either speculation practice suggests the exhaustion of Another fundamental fact prevents time when technical progress is opening limitless horizons to humanity. Contrary to Paul Valery's famous aphorism, this is not the age of the finite, but of the infinite world which is beginning. Even if Europe did not have at its disposal all the wealth in the ground and under the ground. it would none the less still have inomparable prospects ahead, for it is the spirit of experimental science which reveals and evaluates these riches which Europe itself has created and taught to the other peoples.

Besides we must not forget that other field of investigation known under the modern name of "human sciences." It is here perhaps that Europe asserts its greatest original-

To subordinate intellectual activitives is to deprive humanity of that prefiguring of its world-wide unity which has only yet been outlined in cultural terms. The duly of the Intellectuals is to maintain and recreate firelessly a culture of univer-sal value which, in despite of regional particularities, will be superior to political divergencies and spiritually

Now this great mission cannot be carried out by any other continent than Europe. But in Europe itself it cannot be done by any isolated nation for there is not one that alone pos sesses the necessary qualities for the lask. On the contrary, the diversity of the peculiar geniuses of the European peoples is such that they can, in cooperation, constitute the common ground upon which civilization will be restored to its pre-eminence. Is not this the mission of the intel-lectuals—to confront traditional and national cultures with one another, to fix upon their common points and to provide Europe at once with new definition and a new destiny

Not far off was the little country schoolhouse which he attended, and though it was the summer holidays, though it was the summer holidays, the school door was unlocked and Mr. Sprott went in and indulged in the sentimental recollections in spired by the sight of his old one-room school. The seats were different, the blackboards more modern ent, the blackboards more modern, around the walls in picture and chart were evidences of a newer and more liberal attitude to the three R's. But the sight of the empty, clean blackboards gave him an idea. He found the chalk. And on the blackboard, in the finest handacript he could muster, he wrote:

"To learn to write a good, clean, clear hand is the most important thing you can be taught in this school. I am seventy-six years old and learped to write like this in this very schoolroom."

He did not sign it. There is no record as to what the teacher with the meanage. Maybe it was just rubbed off in the husfile of reopening. But it is the sort of thing that might have inspired at least one batch of 20 or 30 country schoolchildren to become good

There has been an easy-going quality about modern schooling that diamity assets mosern accooning that has alarmed many of the older gen-eration. In nothing more than in the handwriting of the present day schoolchild is this decay of the three R's more noticeable. Buy something in any store and look at the writing on the bill. If you didn't know what you had bought, you would never know from the scrawl on the bill. Your name and address, if the goods are to be delivered, is a mere hiero glyphic. Yet the funny thing is, the delivery men seem to be able to read it. Maybe it is just a new style of writing, as different from that of the previous generation as the clothes, hats, neckties. Bad it may be, if the kids can un stand it, it is probably okay.

You could start planning a trip to Bermuda with the money a Hillmon Minx can save you. Or you might take out $15,000 worth of life insurance, or rent a summer cottage or buy a boat! Actually, a Hillman Minx can save you up to $1.14 a day

-$416.43 a year—over other popular cars. But don't take our word for it. Go to any one of the Rootes dealers listed below and ask for the booklet "This is Your Proof". Almost everything costs less with a Hillman. The initial price is close to the lowest and you get up to 35 miles on a gallon of gasoline. And with all its economy, the Hillman seats five and is a wonderful family car in every respect.

Another point—no other imported car can match the Hillman Minx for expert service . . . available parts supply. Make a date with your nearest dealer to drive and discover the Hillman Minzl Closely inspect the Hillman and note its fine finish . . . note, too, that the standard equipment includes Air Conditioning Type Heater and Flashing Type Directional Signals (would be extra on many cars).

Yes, check the Hillman against the price you would pay for any other car fully equipped ready to go on the road and you'll see why your seeing more and more Hillmans on the road.

forged for just such an emergency.

When the Nancy was overtaken, Briggs gave a fine show of righteous indignation. "I arm, sin," he shouted to the British captain, "a neutral ship whose rights have been violated." The British were impressed with his papers, but they still had a funny feeling about the Nancy. They fowed her to Port Royal the Admiralty Prize Court. Briggs presented her case to the Admiralty Prize Court. Briggs presented his papers; the British maintained they were forgeries. Finally, the judges declared that the Nancy must be released unless the British proved her an amposter within 24 hours.

23 hours had passed, and Briggs and his crew were celebrating, when suddenly, Liey Had passed. British proved her an imposter within 24 hours.

CRASH OF BIG FRENCH PLANE CARRIES 42 TO DEATH Police Try Bullet-Proof Vest

The well-dressed Canadian police officer may soon sport armor like knights of old, but about 100 pounds lighter. Tests on a vest-like garment of nylon, weighing only 7%; pounds, proved that the body armorrepels .45 and .38-calibre shells as well as bullets from a nine-millimetre revolver and a Thompson submachine-gun. Here, a Quebec provincial policeman, tests the yests, which are already being used by Townton officers.
